Public Input Sought on Proposed Measures to Stop the Spread of Aquatic Invasive Species Into Yellowstone National Park

30-day public comment period starts March 7

MAMMOTH HOT SPRINGS, WY – Yellowstone National Park seeks public comment on proposed measures to help stop the spread of aquatic invasive species (AIS) into park waters. The proposals include a 30-day mandatory dry time for some types of motorized boats and sailboats before entering park waters and the prohibition of watercraft previously fouled by mussels regardless of dry time.

Yellowstone faces an increased risk of invasion by highly invasive zebra and quagga mussels following recent detections (2022 Pactola Reservoir, South Dakota, and 2023 Snake River, Twin Falls, Idaho) in waterways within a day's drive of the park. Mussels have caused irreversible ecological damage and extensive impacts to infrastructure and recreation in waterways throughout the Midwestern and Eastern United States, as well as in the lower Colorado River Basin. In both 2022 and 2023, Yellowstone's AIS inspectors intercepted and denied launch to mussel-fouled watercraft, highlighting the urgency and severity of the threat.

30-day Dry Time

To protect park waters and respond to this threat, Yellowstone proposes a 30-day dry time requirement for complex, motorized boats (inboard, inboard/outboard, and inboard jet) and sailboats prior to launching. Large, complex, trailered watercraft pose the highest risk of transporting and introducing invasive mussels and other AIS because they are difficult to inspect and less likely to completely drain/dry or be fully decontaminated. Manual decontamination with the use of hot water is not always 100% effective in removing all mussels. A 30-day dry time will mitigate the risk.

Previously Fouled Watercraft

Watercraft (motorized or non-motorized) previously fouled by mussels, regardless of dry time, would be denied launch. The launch of fouled watercraft increases the chances of false mussel detection by routine environmental DNA monitoring of park waters. This could result in significant impacts to operations and public recreational opportunities.

Prevention

These proposals would build on existing protections, including the 2019 prohibition on watercraft equipped with sealed internal ballast tanks, as well as the 2022 prohibition of watercraft with evidence of live or dead mussels.

Yellowstone National Park is located at the headwaters of the Yellowstone, Snake, and Missouri River drainages. These proactive measures are required to ensure the long-term ecological integrity of park waters and downstream mussel-free waters in Wyoming, Montana, and Idaho. Failure to prevent invasion by zebra and quagga mussels could result in widespread negative impacts to natural resources, recreational values and local businesses, and could undo over two decades of work to restore native Yellowstone cutthroat trout to the park. Prevention of an AIS introduction is critical because there are no effective eradication methods, and control/containment is both costly and environmentally consequential.

30-day Public Comment Period

The comment period began March 7 and be open for 30 days. The preferred method for submitting comments is online at <https://parkplanning.nps.gov/yellboats>. Comments may also be mailed to: Yellowstone Center for Resources Attn: AIS Proposed Changes, PO Box 168, Yellowstone National Park, WY 82190. The deadline to submit comments is Friday, April 5.

At the conclusion of the 30-day public comment period, the NPS will analyze and consider all comments received. A final decision is expected in spring 2024.

Custer Gallatin National Forest Recognized at the Golden Pinecone Awards

Forest Accolades Awarded to Bear Aware Program

Bozeman, MT, March 11, 2024— The Custer Gallatin Bear Aware Program has received recognition at the second annual Golden Pinecone Award for its outstanding work in educating the public on bear safety and awareness. This award is presented by national leadership in recognition of exceptional efforts in conservation education. "This award is very important for the forest," expressed Randy Scarlett, Custer Gallatin Wildlife Biologist. He further added, "It emphasizes the commitment of our team to educate the public about bear safety. As we move forward, we intend to improve our efforts in accordance with the growing community and reduce conflicts between humans and bears in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem and other regions." In 2023, the Custer Gallatin National Forest, in partnership with Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks, had nearly 8,000 public interactions by way of presentations, training sessions, TV segments, radio shows, and social media. This success was made possible through the dedicated efforts of several individuals, including biologists, bear technicians, and recreation staff.

8th Grade EPI

The 8th grade class explored their home turf of Yellowstone and dug into team-building and place-based education for four days with the leadership of Ecology Project International (EPI). Students fundraised and EPI wrote a Connect grant (Thank you North Yellowstone Education Foundation) to make the trip happen. They hiked, collected bison fecal samples, used telemetry, and observed wolves. They said it was a 10 out of 10 experience.

FFA NEWS

After traveling Friday, learning all morning Saturday, then competing Saturday afternoon, the following results were announced:

Alexa placed 3rd high individual in Vet Science, winning a backpack full of prizes, a cooler, plus a cool metal plaque! Gardiner placed 8th in Vet as a team with Alexa W., Journey B., Badger H., & Katie K.

Echo S. placed 8th high individual in Mechanics winning a backpack full of goodies (and the only girl announced in the Top 20)

Gardiner placed 14th in Mechanics as a team with Echo S., Cayden H., Franklin L., Colter L., & John S.

Aubrey W. and Sam L. competed in agronomy to brush up before state

Thanks to April Browning for chaperoning, Jeff Kline for driving (especially through a windy trip home), and Conrad FFA Alumni and Mr. McClayland for the great event!
