Requirements for Food Storage Reinstated March 1, 2025

Bozeman, MT, February 18, 2025— Starting March 1, the food and attractant storage order is back in effect on the Bozeman, Hebgen Lake, Gardiner, Yellowstone, and Beartooth Ranger Districts of the Custer Gallatin National Forest. The order helps ensure safe coexistence between people and bears by reducing food-related encounters. The food and attractant storage order will be in effect through December 1, 2025.

According to the food and attractant storage order, all unattended food, trash, and other attractants must be stored in one of the following approved methods:

- In hard-sided vehicles or enclosed trailers;
- In bear-resistant containers or other approved products. A list of approved bear-resistant storage products can be found at www.igbconline.org; or
- Suspended at least 10 feet above the ground, and 4 feet away from adjacent trees/poles, out of the reach of wildlife.

“Reinstating the food storage requirements is a crucial step towards protecting both wildlife and humans. Bears and other animals are incredibly adaptive and drawn to human food sources, which can lead to conflicts. By following these regulations, we not only safeguard our wildlife but also ensure a safer and more enjoyable experience for all visitors to the Custer Gallatin National Forest,” said Custer Gallatin National Forest Wildlife Biologist, Josh Hemenway. “Remember, a clean camp is a safer camp - let’s work together to minimize human-wildlife conflicts and preserve the natural beauty of our forest.”

Individuals who violate the food storage order may be issued a violation and held civilly liable for any damages resulting from non-compliance. For your safety, the safety of other Forest visitors, and bears and other wildlife, it is always a good idea to keep your camp tidy and to store food in a manner that is not accessible to animals.

Please visit Custer Gallatin National Forest - Outdoor Safety & Ethics \(usda.gov\) for more information on bear safety and food storage protocols. Please visit www.igbconline.org for more details on Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee approved products.

Elk Captured in Crazy Mountains Test Negative for Brucellosis

HELENA – Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks staff recently captured elk in the Crazy Mountains northwest of Big Timber as part of a multi-year targeted elk brucellosis surveillance project. All blood samples collected from 52 captured elk tested negative for exposure to brucellosis.

“Test data from live elk captures inform brucellosis management decisions in Montana,” said State Veterinarian Tahnee Szymanski. “These negative test results are valuable to Montana’s livestock industry as they help provide confidence to our trading partners about the quality and strength of our state program.”

Capture operations in the Crazy Mountains were conducted in late January. Sixteen elk were outfitted with GPS collars that will be active for one year to help wildlife managers better understand their seasonal ranges, migration routes and potential mixing with other elk herds. The goal of these operations is to evaluate the presence and understand the movement of brucellosis in Montana’s elk populations. The surveillance also helps wildlife managers and animal health officials understand the overlap between elk and livestock on the landscape.

“We understand that helicopter capture is unappealing to many landowners, and we sincerely appreciate those who took the time to consider our request for capture access,” said FWP Research Technician Jenny Jones.

Brucellosis is a bacterial disease that can infect humans, cattle, bison and elk and can result in abortion or the birth of weak calves. The disease is primarily transmitted through contact with infected birth tissues and fluids. The Montana Department of Livestock (DOL) administers a brucellosis surveillance program for livestock in an area of southwest Montana called the Designated Surveillance Area \(DSA\). Requirements within the DSA protect the state and national livestock industry from the inadvertent spread of brucellosis through livestock movement. Livestock within the DSA are at risk of exposure to brucellosis from infected wildlife and are therefore subject to additional brucellosis testing requirements for movement and change of ownership, as well as additional traceability requirements.

Live elk captures in and around the perimeter of the DSA inform decisions on boundary adjustments by DOL. The Crazy Mountains are located outside of the DSA. The recent test results from the Crazy Mountains provide support for keeping the current DSA boundary unchanged. Montana’s targeted elk brucellosis surveillance project is a joint effort between DOL and FWP, with support from the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation and the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. In addition, this project and capture operation would not be possible without the support and permission from landowners to capture elk on their property.

More information about the surveillance project can be found online at fwp.mt.gov/conservation/wildlife-management/elk. For more information about how brucellosis is managed in Montana livestock, visit liv.mt.gov/Animal-Health/Reportable-Animal-Diseases/Brucellosis.

Montana, BNSF Railway Partner on Plan to Enhance Grizzly Bear Conservation Efforts

KALISPELL — Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks, in partnership with BNSF Railway and Montana's Outdoor Legacy Foundation, is proud to announce the completion of a plan to enhance grizzly bear conservation and conflict reduction efforts in northwest and north-central Montana.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) recently approved BNSF's proposed Habitat Conservation Plan submitted as part of the company's application for an Incidental Take Permit. This landmark plan, developed in collaboration with FWP and others, outlines measures BNSF will take to reduce potential impacts to the Northern Continental Divide Ecosystem (NCDE) grizzly bear population from human-related mortalities. BNSF will provide $2.9 million to support personnel, equipment and education to reduce human-bear conflicts and grizzly bear mortalities in the ecosystem.

Key components of the plan include:

- Conflict Response and Reduction: BNSF will provide funding for additional seasonal grizzly bear technicians employed by FWP. These technicians will work throughout the NCDE on public outreach, conflict response and attractant reduction programs. The funding will provide for additional equipment such as electric fences and bear resistant containers to reduce human-bear conflicts.
- Monitoring Equipment: BNSF will fund additional equipment, such as radio collars and remote cameras, to aid in monitoring bears and reducing conflicts.
- Waste Management: BNSF will fund efforts to improve waste disposal areas and otherwise reduce attractants on public and private property.
- Livestock Conflict Reduction: BNSF will fund measures to reduce livestock depredation and human-bear conflicts.
- Community Engagement and Education: BNSF will provide funding for conflict mitigation efforts in the NCDE through education and outreach efforts, including events and information on living and recreating safely in bear country, reducing attractants, and how to use bear spray.

Since 1991, BNSF has collaborated with tribal, federal, state and local government agencies, conservation groups and industry to address and mitigate concerns about grizzly bear mortality incidental to railroad operations. These efforts include agreements to implement programs and measures to minimize bear and train conflicts, primarily by identifying and removing attractants from the right-of-way and installing deterrents when needed in high-risk areas. As part of this, BNSF has implemented a rapid-response program for grain spills, historically a primary attractant for bears to railways, and expanded bear education for railway employees.

The habitat conservation plan formalizes these ongoing efforts by BNSF to promote grizzly bear conservation by supporting wildlife agencies' management and monitoring programs.

"BNSF is grateful for the insight provided by stakeholders in this process," said John Lovenburg, BNSF VP of Environment & Sustainability. "We look forward to working with federal, tribal and state government partners and Montana's Outdoor Legacy Foundation to ensure the effective implementation of the measures set out in the HCP, as well as the permit issued by USFWS."

Montana's Outdoor Legacy Foundation (MOLF) will oversee the mitigation funds, directing resources to high-priority conservation projects.

"We are working to implement solutions that support both wildlife and communities," said MOLF Director Mitch King. "This funding will help expand conflict prevention programs and support the work of localized bear specialists."

The NCDE is home to one of the largest grizzly bear populations in the contiguous U.S., with an estimated 1,100 bears in the region. The area spans Glacier National Park, the Bob Marshall Wilderness Complex, and surrounding tribal, public and private lands in northwest and north-central Montana. The habitat conservation plan aligns with broader efforts to maintain habitat connectivity and ensure the species' continued recovery under the Endangered Species Act.

"This plan represents a significant partnership and step forward in our continued efforts to bolster grizzly bear recovery and conservation in northwest and north-central Montana," said FWP Director Christy Clark. "Funding from BNSF will support boots on the ground and benefit public safety and grizzly bears. We commend BNSF Railway for working with us on this plan."
